Thank goodness. Maybe I redeemed myself a bit from my previous mental lapses.

The one thing I wasn't sure of is if there would be an update of the Riparian rationale based on Christine's comments—for everyone's further review (similar to the review for my updated OSDS rationale) .

Perfectly stated, Don.

Lynda,

I just touched base with Alan Henning on the status of Forestry-related stuff for which we need management team review. And we know that you will be out of pocket until 10/15 beginning this Friday.

Later today, Alan will be sending around a revised rationale for the "Landslide-Prone Areas" issue, with supplemental info separated out behind it—in the same document, per the management team's preference noted by Christine. So, keep a lookout for it.

With regard to the "Roads" issue, you have already commented on the issue paper, and Alan is preparing that rationale next along the lines that the management team has already discussed. Unfortunately, that will likely be ready for management team review next week after you are out.

With regard to the "Riparian Protections" issue, that draft rationale has already been developed and you have already reviewed it. You and Joelle basically agreed with the comments that Christine provided.

And I sent out a revised rationale for OSDS on Monday as a "track-changes" version and a clean version. It incorporates the management-preferred option for dealing with the "enforceable authorities" piece, in case you want to review that before you head out.

I have copied Alan, whom I trust will let us know if I got any of this Forestry stuff wrong, as there are lots of moving parts...
